SCOUTMASTER'S MINUTE

This is an amazing group of young people being presented Scouting's highest honor, the rank of Eagle Scout. The Eagle has been a symbol of strength, power, leadership, and loyalty. Eagle Scouts represent the best our country has to offer and has included Presidents, astronauts, Nobel Prize laureates, teachers, medical professionals and more. We know today's honorees will be successful in life. What makes this particular group of Scouts very special is they had to overcome the COVID-19 pandemic. During the past two years, each of these Scouts had to work through the cancellation of outdoor activities, camps, scout meetings and much more, while working to complete the challenges of earning this high honor. It has been a difficult time indeed, but these young people have made it to the top of Scouting's highest mountain. Thank you for joining us as we celebrate with our Scouts and families.

Eagle Project: For my Eagle project I wanted to put the "A" in the STREAM LAB at my former elementary school. A in STREAM stands for ART. I built 15 double-sided table-top easels and 2 window easels so that students can paint on the easels and print their artwork. When I was at Dillard, I enjoyed participating in the art club, but resources were slim so I wanted to provide materials for the students. I put together 3 art carts that were filled with art supplies such as watercolors, oil pastels, markers, brushes and so much more.

Scouting is important to me because it is a service-oriented organization. I enjoy serving others and through my time as a scout I have been able to participate in many different service projects. One of my favorite projects was when we were able to help clean up the exhibits at Fort Ross. Another project that I enjoyed was Scouting for Food. For this time, I was not able to participate in this event with the troop, but I picked over 300 pounds of citrus and donated the fruit to the Elk Grove Food Bank along with collecting and donating over 450 pounds of peanut butter. I feel like the scouting programs give scouts opportunities to serve others. Howard Zinn said, "Small acts, when multiplied by millions of people, can transform the world." My hope is that all scouts take part in service projects and work towards making the world a better place for all people.

Scouting is important because it gives young adults a great stepping stone in life. Many companies love to hire eagle scouts and it's an honor that anybody can get. You put in the time and effort to achieve the rank.

The reason I think scouting is important, because it allows youth to learn skills and gives opportunities to go places that some individuals have never been. In troop 380 I have had the opportunity to travel all over the United States from the many parts of California to the Northern tier in Minnesota. Also thanks to scouting I have learned many skills that were taught to me by Troop 380 Assistant Scoutmasters. It was the ASM's that helped me as a new scout till I was first class and continued to help me even after I was first class.

While it required lots of determination, time and effort, being involved in the Scouting community was one of the best decisions I ever made. One of the most rewarding experiences that really stuck out for me was the very first summer camp I attended. It was challenging at first, and I was unfamiliar with the new environment, but quickly did I get the hang of things. Before I knew it, I didn't want that week to end. Scouting has taught me many useful skills and I'm looking forward to applying all that I have learned in the future.

I have always been a shy person, never been as outgoing and confident in myself. But scouting has helped me grow a lot as a person and a scout. I am more confident in myself and more willing to serve in leadership roles because of scouting. The first part of the scout oath "on my honor I will do my best" has been engraved in me not just in scouting but with everything I do in life. Scouting has taught me how to be humble, helpful to others who are in need of help, more willing to teach others new skills and making sure to support others who are hurt or sad. Scouting is important to me because it has taught me so many things but most importantly it has taught me that I can be the best that I can be.

In the many years I've been a scout I have developed important skills such as being respectful to others and the environment, great endurance and persistence, and countless survival and rescue skills. I have also learned what it means to be apart of a team; Almost every outing required some sort of teamwork whether it be carrying prickly Christmas trees into trucks together or traversing across creeks and forests. The most important skill I developed while in scouting was Bravery.

Throughout scouts, I have experienced so many wonderful things and with many wonderful people. Scouts taught me many useful skills like the ones I gained through personal management and personal fitness. It has kept me active in my community and made me always want to try and help those around me.

I was presented a pink WOGGLE to encourage me to complete my journey to Eagle by Logan Reed when he had received his Eagle rank. The previous holders of this special woggle were: John Desmond, Adam Boles and Daniel Richardson. I am presenting this woggle to Cooper Davis to continue on with this tradition. Good luck to you and I hope you take pride in wearing it as much I did.

Scouting has been very important to me because it has taught me so many important skills that I use in life such as survival, cooking, and overall preparedness. I have always enjoyed the many camps I've gone on and all of the locations they have taken me to. I gained confidence in aspects such as camping, hiking and leadership. My leadership is one highlight that has grown and I use it in many parts of my life. I have also met many friends throughout my journey. Scouts has been very impactful and I'm very thankful to be a part of it.

One of my biggest takeaways from scouts was my Eagle Project. I interviewed Sam Clower, a 101 year WWII survivor and veteran. I was able to preserve his life stories before he passed away a mere month later. He survived being a prisoner of war, prison camps, pearl harbor, and getting shot. He was a brave man with incredible stories and I am thankful to have preserved his first hand accounts forever in the shape of a virtual documentary. I was also able to give a transcript of Sam's stories to the historian at the Pearl Harbor Memorial in Hawaii for their archives. It was a great honor to present my interview to Sam's family for them to have forever. They actually played a portion of my video at his funeral. I am honored to have a small part in preserving a piece of history from one of the greatest generations to have lived in this country.

Scouting is important to me for a variety of reasons. Not only has it helped me expand myself with practical outdoor skills but through scouting, I have grown so much overall as a person. I have developed leadership skills, I gained lifelong friends, and I have had the ability to go on so many exciting activities that I could not have done anywhere except in scouts. Overall, scouting has had an important impact on both my life and the lives of those in my community.

Scouting is important because it helps to form the backbone for who you are for the rest of your life. You develop skills and a deeper understanding of what it means to be a good member of society. I only left the scouting program a few months ago, and I have found that I utilize the experiences I have accumulated on a daily basis.

Scouting has been important and essential in my daily life. This experience has provided me a structured lifestyle I use daily through the Scout Oath, Law, and Motto every day. An opportunity like scouting has taught me leadership, and good habits that will help me be prepared and successful in my life. Scouting has positively influenced my ability to show up in my communities with integrity and commitment to make a difference. Achieving the ultimate goal of being an Eagle Scout has shown me that I can persevere through difficult things, motivate me, and work hard towards my life goals. But, I could not have done this alone and I am grateful for the troop and my parents for their commitment to my success.

Scouting is important to me because of the life skills and lessons it teaches you. Also, it prepares you to be a well rounded adult. Scouting is not only fun but its also a lifestyle that allows me to explore and experience more than the average teenager that isn't in scouts, like multiple summer camps, back packing, traveling to different states and participating in many community events and charities. It allows me to use it on my resume to be more appealing to employers.

I think scouting is important because it can help you open up and become a leader. I know it did for me I used to be very shy and not talk to strangers, but now I talk to mostly every one. It also gave me a chance to lead people like my patrol and cub scout den. It helped me with control and sharing information. I'm still not very good with it but it still helped me. I also learned time management, if you were late you wouldn't be able to go to summer camp because everyone is gone or you will be scolded for being late.
